

Rabbis Seek School Limit To Permit Jewish Education

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
ASBURY PARK, N. J.—Resolutions urging a shorter school day to permit time for religious education, reaffirming adherence to democracy and endorsing the Wagner-Rogers child refugees' bill were put before the 39th annual convention of the Rabbinical Assembly of America this week by its Social Justice Committee.

Reporting for the committee to more than 100 Conservative rabbis gathered at the Clarendon-Brunswick Hotel, Rabbi Isidore B. Hoffman, chaplain at Columbia University, urged the shortened school day to "make it possible for families to give their children an adequate religious education without overburdening the child's daily program." On the ground that the public school should be "the central agency for the building of the American nation" the committee opposed "any such step as the segregation of children along religious lines or the dismissal of children for denominational religious instruction during the school day," as has been proposed in some quarters.

See House Fight On White Paper

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LONDON—A strong fight to secure re-opening of the Palestine issue and reconsideration of the new White Paper policy by the House of Commons is predicted in Parliamentary circles.

Members of Parliament have been pressing Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald to secure publication of the League of Nations Mandates Commission's observations on the White Paper before Parliament adjourns on July 28 and to give Commons an opportunity to discuss the question further before the Government goes to the League Council for ratification of its new Palestine policy.

Opponents of the new policy state that if the report of the Mandates Commission holds that the White Paper is not consistent with the Mandate, the Government may not be able to retain the slim majority which approved the White Paper after a two-day debate in May. Many Government supporters voted in favor of the new policy then, they assert, under the Government's assurances that the White Paper conformed to the Mandate. Should the Mandates Commission go on record as stating that the new policy is not in accordance with the Mandate, they declare, it will have a strong effect on these M. P.'s.

Cuba Okehs 'Confessions', Overriding Nazi Protest

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
HAVANA—Overriding protests by the German Legation, the Cuban National Motion Picture Revising Commission unanimously ratified its previous approval of the American film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Felix del Prado, who presided, said all members of the commission had agreed the film could not be considered offensive to the German Government.

DR. DAVIDSON DIES
By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
GREAT NECK, N. Y.—Dr. Israel Davidson, professor of Medieval Hebrew Literature at the Jewish Theological Seminary, died at his country home after a brief illness. He was 69 years old. The Zionist convention in New York sent a telegram of condolence to Mrs. Davidson, paying tribute to "his monumental, scholarly works to restore and preserve the precious literary treasures of our people."

New Group Wanders In Forest, Dogs At Heels

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
WARSAW—A new group of Jews deported from Germany arrived at the Polish frontier while 400 to 500 others continued their week-long wandering in the "no-man's-land." The new party reached the Polish border station of Zbonszyn from Cologne, the Saar and other western German provinces. Only a score of them, whose Polish documents were in order, were permitted to pass the border.

The others joined the previous deportees, who, according to reports from the border towns of Zbonszyn, Rybnik and Beuthen, were suffering severe privation in the frontier area. These refugees, including many children, cripples and aged persons, wandered in the fields and forests, hunted by dogs let loose by frontier guards, who injured many and tore their clothes to shreds.

One woman and one child were killed when driven off by Polish frontier guards. One man died of exhaustion.

Torn From Beds

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
PARIS—Advices from Berlin said 150 Jews of Hanover were taken from their beds during the night and shipped in two trains to the Polish border. Fifty of the group reached Neubentchen and were driven across the Polish-German frontier with hounds at their heels. One of the deportees, Israel Roman, 80, died and his body is still lying on the frontier. Fate of the remaining 100, who reached the frontier station Beuthen, is so far unknown. The victims include blind and aged men and women from institutions.

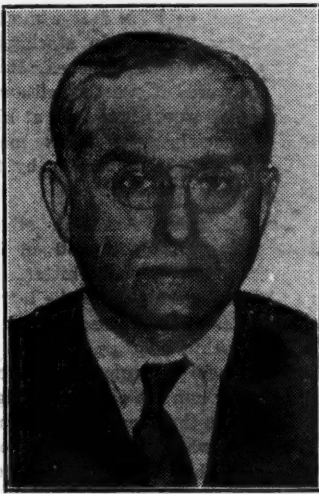

3rd Wife Jewish, Composer's Kin Lose

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
VIENNA—Descendants of the famous Viennese "waltz king," Johann Strauss, were barred from inheritance of his musical and personal property, which reverts to the city of Vienna, by an official ruling, climaxing Julius Streicher's campaign to disinherit Strauss's "non-Aryan" descendants.

The Austrian composer, who died in 1899, married a Jewess converted to the Roman Catholic faith, Adele Deutsch, his third wife. The royalties he left her will now become Viennese property. Recently, repeated attacks in Streicher's newspaper, Der Stürmer, forced a daughter of Strauss by a previous marriage to turn over to Vienna violins and manuscripts which her father left her.

Help Raise $20,000 for Hebrew University

FRANKFURTER

LONDON—United States Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, here on a holiday, and prominent British leaders were speakers at a dinner to raise funds to establish refugees at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. A total of $20,000 was pledged. The Archbishop of York presided, with other speakers including former Education Minister Herbert A. L. Fisher, Lord Samuel, Lord Reading and Humbert Wolfe, principal assistant secretary at the Ministry of Labor. The dinner was arranged by the non-sectarian Society for the Protection of Science and Learning.

LORD SAMUEL

A. Z. A. Names Cripple To Highest Position

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
PORT JERVIS, N. Y.—Joseph Borenstein, 20-year-old Northwestern University freshmen, who has been suffering from infantile paralysis for many years and gets around on crutches, has been elected grand president of Aleph Zadik Aleph, junior B'nai B'rith, the largest Jewish boys' organization in the United States and Canada, at its sixteenth annual convention. Despite his physical handicap, Borenstein has been one of the most active leaders in A. Z. A. Before his election to the highest office in the order, he was president of District 6, which includes the Middle West. He is now president of the Chicago Council of A. Z. A.

The Supreme Advisory Council authorized the establishment of an A. Z. A. Palestine scholarship which will enable an A. Z. A. member to spend a year in Palestine studying and working as a means of obtaining a first-hand picture of the situation in the Jewish homeland.

Tientsin Blockade Affects 2,000 Jews

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
TIENTSIN, China—More than 2,000 Jews were affected by the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions here. Most of them have businesses within the concessions, while a number reside in Japanese-controlled sections of the city. A majority of the Tientsin Jews are of Russian origin, having come here via Harbin. Only a few are German Jews, with refugees among their number.

Alaskan Entry Bill Received By Senate

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
WASHINGTON—The Senate received a companion measure, introduced by Senator Ernest W. Gibson (Rep., Vt.), to a bill offered in the House of Representatives by Andrew J. May (Dem., Ky.) for admission of political refugees to Alaska. Senator Gibson's bill proposes admission of colonists from any nation on condition that they can prove that they had never engaged in subversive activities in their native countries and had given up all allegiance to any other power. As in Representative May's proposal the number of immigrants admitted could equal the unfilled entry quotas to the United States.

African Wilds Ready For Jewish Colonizers

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia—The British experts' commission sent to investigate colonization possibilities in Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland on behalf of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee has completed its work and left for England. It is understood that the commission's report has already been prepared and that it considers a proposal to settle a large number of refugees in the Mwinilungu district, which has a high elevation and is well watered but is difficult to reach.

High Commissioner Gets Sweeping Power To Stop Transfer

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
JERUSALEM—Issuance of sweeping restrictions on sale of lands, carrying out Britain's new Palestine policy, was followed last week by a wave of anti-Arab violence in which thirteen were killed and fifteen wounded, leading the authorities to invoke drastic retaliation against the Jews.

Powers to prohibit, restrict and regulate transfers of land in any part of Palestine have been delegated to High Commissioner Sir Harold Alfred MacMichael in an amendment to the Palestine Order-in-Council published in the official Palestine Gazette. The amendment provides that the regulations may be made retroactive to May 15 and further empowers the high commissioner to (1) limit the application of regulations to transfers between Arabs and Jews, or from Arabs or Jews to others, or from Arabs or Jews to corporation or non-corporate bodies (2) invalidate transfers contravening the regulations; (3) prescribe penalties for violations.

British authorities intensified retaliatory measures against Jews as the toll in two days' attacks on Arabs reached thirteen killed and fifteen wounded. These included twelve Arabs killed and four wounded in six attacks near Tel Aviv, Rehoboth and Petach Tikvah.

Entire Colony Arrested

Next day eleven Arabs were wounded when a bomb demolished an Arab cafe near Spinney's, British provisioners. The authorities, holding Jews responsible, immediately imposed severe punitive measures. Another Arab, meanwhile, was shot dead in the Mea Shearim quarter of the city.

The Jerusalem military commander ordered all Jewish cafes in the city closed at 8 o'clock nightly until further notice and banned Jewish traffic to and from Jerusalem until 6 o'clock Sunday evening. The entire Betar (militant Revisionist body) division at the colony of Rishon-le-Zion, numbering forty-six men and seven girls, was rounded up and committed to the government concentration camp at Sarafend.

Military and police searches in the vicinity of Rehoboth resulted in the arrest of seventy-four Jewish immigrants charged with entering the country illegally.

Reports of a police search in the Bokharian quarter of Jerusalem told of brutal treatment accorded several hundred Jews rounded up in the old city during the hunt for suspects in the shooting of an Arab. Three hundred Jews were said to have been kept standing for four hours under a hot sun in the courtyard of the Mea Shearim police station. Those detained ranged from youths to white-bearded elders. They included well-known and respected residents and several

PHILLIES AT BOTTOM OF LADDER, BUT MORRIS TOPS LEAGUE WITH .400 MARK

For a lad who originally went in for teaching, Morry Arnovich of the Philadelphia Nationals is doing mighty fine as a baseball player. For since the current grind got under way early in April the Jewish youngster has been up among the first five hitters in the major circuits—and for the past few weeks has been leading both leagues with the healthiest batting average ever seen in the big league ball parks.

Morry has been hitting .400. To those in the know, a .400 hitter is a dangerous man at the plate; a hitter who comes through in the pinches, bats in runs, gets on bases with monotonous regularity. However, for the uninitiated, a .400 hitter is one who hits safely and lands on first or further two times of every five trips to the plate. Such a performance in the first fifty games this 25-year-old junior rookie has participated in during the current season is well nigh marvelous.

When Arnovich wound up the first seven games of the 1939 baseball campaign with the incredible batting average of .500, the experts were unanimous in saying that "such things are possible—especially in the early springtime, but a man can't keep up so terrific a pace." But Morry, marked as a seasonal hitter, has been banging the apple for base hits from daisy bed to asparagus field with reckless abandon. True, he doesn't hit for so many extra bases but the record books will show how, because of such powerfully consistent hitting, Arnovich's bat has nailed the Philly club batting to the top of the National circuit.

And—what is more incredible—the Philly Nationals are in the cellar of the senior league despite Arnovich, their club batting and their new field.

A Wisconsin Yoke

Arnovich hails from Sheboygan, Wis. It's not even considered a whistle-stop for the fast freights and the Sheboygan residents still reckon time from the moment Morry broke into the big league four years ago.

This lad first played baseball with an outfit whose home town was a way-station known as Superior. It was a Class D semi-pro outfit and the Jewish youngster—he was 18 then—pocketed seven-fifty ($7.50) after each ball game. From the Great Lakes he progressed to another tank-town on the baseball circuit and played with the Hazleton, Pa., nine where his clouting was the talk of the New York-Pennsylvania league. It was not long after that when he was spotted by one of the talent scouts of the big league who had Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Quaker City club, drop around to watch him. Morry was signed the same day and played in fifteen games for his new owners. His timely hitting in those few games nevertheless marked him as a lad with promise and not merely one of the numerous pan-broiled flashes whom a talent scout had caught on an exceptionally brilliant day.

The Wisconsin kid—he was 22 when he landed in Philly with a major league contract in his pocket—was honored by his organization, B'nai B'rith, the very next season, his freshman year in the big time. (Incidentally, the Phils were playing the Cincinnati Reds that day on which Arnovich was honored and Ernie Lombardi—the catching Goliath of the Reds—asked to become an honorary member of the B'nai B'rith organization. The Italian backstop was convinced the B'nai B'rith was a Jewish baseball organization and hoped that by becoming an honorary member in such a society his hitting would improve. Lombardi, the sparkplug of the league-leading Cincy Reds, is convinced that his hitting spree is a direct result of his induction as an honorary member to the B'nai B'rith.)

Arnovich played bang-up ball his first and second seasons with the major league outfits and had earned a reputation of being a good ball player . . . steady and determined if not brilliant and brittle.

Not Like Greenberg

However, as we remarked at the outset, Arnovich has been writing baseball records with his phenomenal work with the bat thus far this season. The kid, in his twenty-fifth year, is still looked upon as a steady and determined player, but now they're saying he's "great stuff"—wasting his time with the Philly Nats—"killing himself on a dime ball club"—to which Morry answer nothing more than a few additional pegs in the .400 batting average column.

Compared to his more brilliant brother-in-arms, the Bronx Bambino, or Hank Greenberg, he is not of the same mould. Greenberg stands well over six feet while the best Morry can do in stockinged feet is five feet ten inches. Hank tips the scales at over 200, although you'd never guess it to look at him, and Arnovich, who looks more, weighs only 175. Morry is by far the faster of the two.

At the plate Arnovich stands with his right foot well in the bucket and is a choke-hitter. He can bat effectively from the left or right sides of the plate although he is a southpaw pegger when he throws them in from the outfield. Greenberg can hit only from right but can hit the greater wallop and hit them when they count more. Greenberg has been in the majors but one years more than Arnovich. The Bambino hits doubles, triples and homers galore, but the times between hits are nerve-wracking stretches for the big slugger from the Bronx. Morry, on the other hand, hits often but can't hit for many extra bases as often as the big guy from the Bronx. If he masters Greenberg's knack of slugging, it's a sure fire bet that the B'nai B'rith laddies will be honoring a member with the combined virtues of a DiMaggio, Danning, McCormick and Mize all rolled into one.

It will be interesting to note what Arnovich's average is at the end of the season. He enters the July 4 stretch—midway between the bases—a .400 hitter.

PROTESTS BRING ACTION

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—Declaring the police department must be impartial in its handling of disturbances arising from sale of Father Charles E. Coughlin's magazine, Social Justice, and rival publications, Police Commissioner Valentine appointed a committee headed by Byrnes MacDonald, a former deputy police commissioner, to investigate the entire problem. Appointment of the committee followed receipt of many letters complaining that police were showing partiality in the disturbances, many of which developed into cases of assault.

Tunney Sells First Copy of Catholic Paper To LaGuardia

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—The first of 200,000 copies of The Voice, newspaper of the Committee of Catholics to Fight Anti-Semitism, was presented to Mayor LaGuardia at the World's Fair City Hall by Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight boxing champion and member of the committee. Tunney termed anti-Semitism "a flame out of hell" whose "unholy and devastating powers apparently were conceived in hell."

Distribution of the paper in the metropolitan area began immediately. The eight-page tabloid features in its first issue an article under the banner headline: "Bishops Condemn Anti-Semitism." The paper also contains condemnations of race hatred by many individual Catholics.

In making the presentation, Tunney said: "I loathe public controversies and run from taking sides as I would from the plague. But the question of anti-Semitism is no longer a matter of individual opinion or public controversy; it has become an actual movement, spreading across our country with the rapidity of a prairie fire—scorching everything and person it touches. It is like a flame out of hell, and its unholy and devastating powers apparently were conceived in hell."

"As Christians we must remember the words of Pope Pius XI: 'Abraham is called our Patriarch, our Ancestor. Anti-Semitism is not compatible with the reality of this text; it is a movement in which we Catholics can not share. It is not possible for Christians to take part in anti-Semitism. We are Semites spiritually.' No Catholic, remembering these words of our late Holy Father, can sit idly by without taking some action or protest if only in memory of that great spiritual leader—Pius XI."

AND then, there as the laziest man in the world, who crossed his lawn with sword grass. And now when the wind blows, his lawn cuts itself.

Catholic Group Snubs Organizer Wanted For Graft

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—Allen Zoll, who organized the weekly picketing of Station WMCA for its refusal to broadcast Father Charles E. Coughlin's talks, was disowned by the pickets after he had been arraigned on a charge of seeking to extort $7,500 from Donald Flamm, president of the station. A sign carried by Coughlinite pickets at the station's building said: "Allen Zoll is a Traitor."

Zoll, who called himself director of the American Committee for Constitutional Government, was arraigned yesterday and held in $5,000 bail. Police said they arrested him Friday when he accepted $200 in marked bills from Flamm. He had promised, police said, to call off the pickets when he received $7,300 more. Zoll denied the charge before Magistrate Richard McKiniry and hearing was set for today (Friday).

Black clothing was not originally meant to show grief because a loved one had departed. Primitive peoples believed that ghosts were unable to see through black, and the color was employed to hide from the spirits of those who had died.

Oh say can you see
By the dawn's early light
That your face is all bitten
And your hair is a sight?

The combination of attacking mosquitoes, thunder like the roar of cannons, lightning streaking across the sky in the manner of tracer bullets, pelting rain and noisy firecrackers made this a truly realistic Independence Day. But, I'll bet you all had a grand time anyhow.

Up at Lake Manitou we saw Jack Larman with Joan Weiss, and Joe Ceresky with Eleanor Rothenberg from Chicago. Saw another member of the tribe from Martinsville, but I just can't remember his name. Evalyn Goldsmith and Dave Cohen were up there too, as were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schwartz.

Joe Schwartz got himself a vacation for the first time in three years and he and his fiancée, Bernice Cohen, really are having a keen time flitting from hither to yon. In the meanwhile, his employer, Dr. Harold Jaffe, the optician, is experiencing a business boom and I'm willing to bet he'll lose twenty pounds this week taking care of the customers without ol' reliable Joe at his side. That's the way things go, Doc!

I suppose when he gets back your business will be rushing—right past the door—such is life!

Jeanette Karlsruh, remember her, Solie Crash, is going to summer school here in Indianapolis. She hails from Monticello and is a blond with blue eyes in case some of you muggs are looking for a bit of sweetness.

The Temple Youth Group of Fort Wayne put on a mighty elegant dance Saturday night at the Fort Wayne Country Club. We spied Becky Azimow of Alexandria, Peggy Marx of Muncie, Rabbi Weingart and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Maier of Decatur, Norman Franklin with Dorothy Fichman, Lillian Fichman, Mr. and Mrs. Fichman, the gals' momma and poppa; Wilbur Zweig, Rose Moyer with her fella, Mannie Rothberg, Jack Moyer and Evalyn Pinkus, Millicent Frank and Harry Moyer, Dr. Weinraub, the former Betty Rose Wolf and her husband, the former Frances Schwartz and her spouse, Betty Edlovich, Myron Kann, Betty Kann, Myron Goldman, Joe Rosenberg the insurance man, Sid Weiss and Rae Steiber, and many, many more. Recognize any of these people, Nap towners?

Just learned that Arvin Rothschild left for New York Monday to take over the job of assistant boys' sales manager for MacFadden Publications. Lot's of luck to you Arv.

It's hard to get over the shock of Sid Netzorg's death. Having known him closely and gone to school with him makes it difficult to believe what happened. To his family and relatives we offer our deepest sympathy.

How many of you follow the grand game of baseball, especially the antics of our own ball club, the Indians? Well, to those of you who haven't heard, as this column goes to press Milt Galatzer, Yiddish slugger and outfielder with the Tribe, has hit safely in the last twenty consecutive games! That, friends, is really sumpin'.

The other night on the way home from work we passed the Fink Auto Company and there, in full view of God and everybody, was Howard Dulberger manipulating a Yo Yo with Lou Fink waiting his turn. Boys will be boys, you know.

When Paul V. McNutt returned last week and spoke before what was a disappointing turnout, in our humble opinion, I noticed Senator Jake Weiss up on the speaker's stand all decked out in white and getting along amiably with all his fellow statesmen.

What was interesting to me, though, as I watched the proceedings, was the comment of a gentleman standing next to me. Obviously not Jewish, he was asked by the man on his right who the large fellow with the horn-rimmed glasses was. His answer ran something like this: "Who, he? That's our senator of the Jewish faith, Mr. Weiss, and I'm proud to see a man of his caliber helping to carry out the will of the people." Three cheers for Sullivan county, because this man wore a badge proclaiming him a resident therein. Gosh, hearing something like that makes a fellow feel good all over. Doug Brown took his first flying lesson out at the Hoosier airport a short time ago but even though he vows he'll go up again, he claims the things are still nothing more than oil cloth and bamboo!

See you all next week.

Dan Frisch had an eye-opener on his recent trip to the Cejwin Camp at Port Jervis, New York. His son and daughter are attending the camp and he visited while the national Young Judaea convention was in progress. At the same time the national A. Z. A. convention was going on, and hearing that Mr. Frisch was nearby, they asked him if he would serve as one of the judges for the national oratorical contest. He served and was astounded at the profundity of the addresses, which he himself said could have been delivered at any Zionist convention, and he was surprised at the deep Zionist interest of the youths.

The meeting is open to all officers, delegates, and alternates. Transportation arrangements may be made by calling Mrs. Isaac Born, HA. 4179.

INDIANA FUR CO.:

A veritable bombshell will soon burst on the glorious horizon, one that will create quite a stir in ol' Nap Town and its vicinity. July 15 is the date, and we want you to watch this paper for the details. Yes, the INDIANA FUR CO. is preparing for their July and August fur sales, and the gorgeous creations, awaiting the gaze of appreciative eyes, will hold you spellbound. Mr. Davidson recently returned from New York where he attended the Annual Fashion Show and he purchased thousands of new models and some original furs. Price as well as quality will astound you, and it will be possible for each and every one of you to own a new garment. Remember, watch the Post next week.

HILLMAN'S:

We've talked of HILLMAN'S reputation, their methods of dealing with the public and the pleasant manner of their salespeople; but now, let's talk of the dresses they sell. What about them? Well, walk in there sometime, wander around, and then pick a cute little number from the racks. Hold it to you, feel the material, inspect the accurate stitching, the fine and original style and note the sturdiness which guarantees long wear. Do these things and then you will know why HILLMAN'S, the exclusive shop, continues to add to their clientele, and boasts so many satisfied customers. They know that money spent at HILLMAN'S is well spent because they receive fine merchandise.

KEMPLER RADIO CO.:

As you step into KEMPLER'S your eye immediately falls on one particular object, truly a thing of beauty. It is a Philco Bar Radio. This receiver, having an all-wave band and equipped with push button tuning, has a mirrored bar which is completely equipped, except, of course, for the actual firewater. It has a storage compartment for liquors, ice tongs, glasses, and resembles a full-sized bar, that's how fully adequate it is. When not in use it folds into the top of the cabinet and it is a beautiful cabinet indeed. Why don't you surprise some bride-to-be, and especially her groom, with this Philco? It is being offered at a 25 per cent reduction at KEMPLER'S.

Barton Takes Issue With Thorkelson on Entries In Record

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
WASHINGTON — Representative Bruce Barton, Republican, of New York, told the House that reference by Representative Jacob Thorkelson, Republican, of Montana, to certain Jewish legislators during a statement denouncing Communism was in inexcusably bad taste. The Congressional Record carried the extended remarks of Thorkelson, which earlier precipitated a sharp verbal clash between the Montanan and House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn (Dem., Texas) on the subject of racial prejudice.

When Thorkelson asked permission of the House to extend his remarks in the Record, normally a routine matter, Rayburn arose to ask if he intended "as he does so many times" to place in the publication material appealing to racial prejudices. In his extension remarks the other day, he referred to Communists, various persons engaged in un-American activities, etc., and then named every Jew in the House who is chairman of a committee or a ranking member of a committee. Just what does the gentleman mean by mentioning the names of these Jewish members when referring to those engaged in un-American activities? Then the gentleman quoted the provision in the Constitution to the effect that no person holding an office or trust under the United States shall accept a present, emolument or favor from any king or a foreign state. Did the gentleman intend to accuse the Jewish members of being Com-

Jewish Youth Raises $203,267 In Spring United Appeal Drives

SPECIAL NEW YORK—Spurred by one of the greatest crises in Jewish history, American Jewish youth, through the agency of the junior division of the Joint Distribution Committee broke an all-time record in amounts raised by their age group for overseas aid.

Junior division leaders, reporting to Pauline Baerwald Falk, honorary chairman, and Lois Hollander Cole, national chairman of the division, revealed that in fifty-nine communities $203,267 had been raised in support of the Spring phase of the United Jewish Appeal.

This sum, which is approximately $90,000 more than was raised during the entire year of 1938, will be considerably increased when the junior division campaigns are completed this month in San Francisco, Calif.; Hamilton, Ontario, Canada; Windsor, Ontario, Canada; Buffalo, N. Y.; Newburgh, N. Y.; Beaver Valley, Pa., and Waco, Texas.

How Jewish Doctor Found Cause For Pellagra Told

[Editor's Note: At a time when Nazi world propaganda is challenging the equal rights of Jews in their countries of citizenship, it is important to dramatize the contributions of the Jews. This is the fifth of a series of playlets presenting in vivid form the saga of the Jews in American history. It is suggested that these sketches be used by Jewish organizations as the basis of dramatic presentations at meetings. These playlets were adapted by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency from material prepared for a recent Department of Interior broadcast on the Columbia Broadcasting System. The script was written by Gilbert Selde, the noted journalist, on the basis of research done by the Service Bureau for Intercultural Education in New York.]

By GILBERT SELDES

[The United States Government was getting alarming reports of a strange disease, its symptoms a red blotch, its cause and cure unknown, its effects deadly. Whole counties in the South were decimated by it. Finally the department sent one of its young researchers, Dr. Joseph Goldberger, to see what he could do. Goldberger went South, enlisted local aid, called on the families of victims. In the home of one victim...]

SOUTHERN WOMAN: ... a terrible disease. You just get this red mark on you and you waste away. I've seen my man die that way and now the young 'uns seem to be taking it. They'll be dyin' too. ...

DOCTOR: Sarahlou, this is a doctor from Washington... government's sent him down to see what can be done about the disease with the red mark. They call it pellagra. ...

WOMAN: Call it any name... it just comes and puts the mark on you... and you die. ...

GOLDBERGER: Not all of them die.

WOMAN: My folks all do. ... Folks say it's a germ floating in the air. ...

GOLDBERGER: It's not a germ. There is a cause for pellagra.

[Even in the hospitals where it was treated, doctors thought pellagra must be contagious. In a hospital...]

GOLDBERGER: But it can't be contagious. Look here... twenty nurses... they've handled a thousand cases in the past three months... not one nurse has contracted pellagra.

DOCTOR: Then how does it spread?

GOLDBERGER: Maybe it doesn't spread. Maybe a whole village gets pellagra because everyone in the village is exposed to the same conditions.

DOCTOR: Well, we take them out of the conditions... put them here in the hospital... and still only a few cases are cured. ...

GOLDBERGER: Let me see the records. ...

DOCTOR: They're right in that file.

GOLDBERGER: Let's see whether there's anything special about the ones that are cured. ...

[Joseph Goldberger started out on a long trail with only one clue. There seemed to be a definite connection between pellagra and poverty. ... It was Goldberger's job to prove that. He soon found a scientist to collaborate with him—James Babcock.]

GOLDBERGER: Pellagra is the result of lack of proper food. No one on a proper diet has ever had pellagra, no one who has pellagra has been on a proper diet. If you want to abolish pellagra, start with abolishing poverty. Or if you can't do that, watch the food of the people.

BABCOCK: It doesn't seem possible. Lots of other people, in different parts of the country, are poor... their diet isn't any better.

GOLDBERGER: No doubt. But the particular foods eaten in this part of the country by the very poor lack specific elements. We'll find out what they are.

[Goldberger, in collaboration with Babcock, set to work not so much to cure, as on the prevention of pellagra. In the end he discovered that the addition of proper foods to the diet was an adequate protection. A plague as ghastly as cholera was virtually washed away. Goldberger died young. ... Another great physician and discoverer, happily still alive, worked on the prevention of diphtheria—Bela Schick. His great discovery was a test to be used in the fight against diphtheria. This test has been used in millions of cases and eminent physicians say that if it is used promptly it can, in connection with other methods, completely banish diphtheria from the entire world.]

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK

When Grandfather's Clock was installed, the maker remarked that it was built to run a hundred years.

The Clock overheard the remark and spent the next hour in figuring. It found that in a hundred years it would tick 3,155,760,000 times. It threw up its hands and decided to strike.

Then, being a well-balanced clock, it began to look at the situation in a different way.

There was plenty of time for each tick and the ticks and to be produced only one at a time.

So it went on, unceasing, unrelenting, and a hundred years later it was still doing its job with ease, comfort and precision.

MORAL: We may have to go through a lot... but we only have to go through a minute of it at a time.

Fame Without Honor

Lord Roberts once found himself among new friends in a London club. There was a very tall man present who evidently believing himself to shine as a wit, seized every opportunity to raise a laugh at another's expense.

On being introduced to Lord Roberts, the wit bent down patronizingly to his lordship and remarked: "I have often heard of you, but—" shading his eyes with one hand, as though the famous general, being so small could only be seen with difficulty, "I have never seen you."

To this, Lord Roberts promptly replied: "I have often seen you, sir, but I have never heard of you."

Bringing slot machines to the schoolroom has disillusioned boys of the Proctor Academy about "easy money from gambling." The headmaster of the school learned that the boys were playing the machines, so he went to police headquarters, secured a confiscated machine, and set it up in the mathematics room. He then had the instructor work up a problem involving the law of mathematical probability to be solved by playing the machine with "phony" money.

The boys learned that a player hits the jackpot once in 4,000 times. At 5 cents a throw, that meant it would cost about $200 to win $5. They also learned that the next highest pay-off was once in 2,000 plays. It cost $100 to win $1.

A recent survey showed that 10,700,000 American women are gainfully employed in some occupation outside the home. Of this number four-fifths are either professional or clerical workers. Nine out of every twenty clerical and professional women workers are paid out of public or tax funds; 7,525,000 gainfully employed women have never been married; 690,000 women gainfully employed are independent workers operating their own business.

GASTRONOMIC NOTE: Denunciation being the order of the day at the recent Z. O. A. convention in New York, Maurice Samuel, the celebrated author and lecturer, turned his oratorical ire on a target which has hitherto escaped the shafts of speakers. . . . Meaning the food served at the convention banquet. . . . First speaker after the coffee had been downed by the diners, Samuel opened with a blistering barrage against the quality and quantity of the viands. . . . The feast, he said, presented a mathematical problem of no mean scope. . . . The problem being to see "how many nothings put together make something." . . . The unprecedented and unexpected onslaught brought the heaviest applause of the evening, in which the press table was not the least conspicuous.

LANGUAGE NOTE: Only a small group around the press table heard it, but Jack Fishman's hybrid salutation to Mrs. Eleazar Lipsky is already making the rounds and will soon probably be (if it hasn't already been) picked up by the young bloods of Tel Aviv. . . . Approaching Mrs. Lipsky, J. F. greeted her with a pat on the back and a jolly "Shalom, toots!" . . . The greeting caused a ripple of merriment for many tables around.

AGE NOTE: When Dr. Solomon Goldman, in reading his presidential message to the convention, came to the part in which he urges that all the "old" men resign from the Zionist executive and administrative committees, Dr. Stephen S. Wise turned to the Rev. Zvi Hirsch Masliansky, dean of American Zionists, and was heard to remark: "I guess that means us."

POLITICAL NOTE: After committee appointments had been announced at the convention, Dr. Simon Greenberg, president of the Rabbinical Assembly, arose and announced that all those satisfied with their assignments would meet outside—in the telephone booth.

TOASTMASTER NOTE: Judge Morris Rothenberg did a good job of toastmastering at the banquet. . . . Even if he did (without meaning any discourtesy) show signs of impatience during the musical interlude. . . . When, after each number by the songstress, he arose as if to resume his toastmastering, not realizing that the interlude was not yet over. . . . The judge, by the way, told one of the banquet's most amusing stories at the expense of the British. . . . An Irish friend, the judge related, had one day expressed surprise to him at the Zionists' growing friendship with the British. . . . "Do you know why," the Irishman asked M. A., "the sun never sets on the British Empire? It's because the Lord wouldn't trust the British in the dark."

MISH-MASH: One of B'way's sprightliest musicals is "From Vienna," put on by a band of refugee Viennese who have signed a pact to stick together as a unit for two years. Breathing the Viennese spirit of "gemeutlichkeit," spiced with a poignant bit of satire here and there, the revue is attracting large and moist-eyed audiences from among the city's gay and sentimental. Hollywood scouts, who will have to wait until the two-year pact runs its course or take the whole troupe, are already reported parked hopefully on the steps of the Music Box's stage door. Illa Roden and Paul Rodenberg are among the troupe's outstanding performers, the former scoring a decided hit in "Little Ballerina" and the latter stirring laughter and tears with his portrayal of a refugee's battle with the English language in a skit called "English in Six Easy Lessons." . . . Have you ever paused to wonder why it is called the Jewish Palestine Pavilion at the World's Fair and not just the Palestine Pavilion? It's because the Palestine government refused to sanction use of the latter name on the grounds that the exhibit was not official. . . . The reporter who asked President Roosevelt at a recent press conference whether he intended to run for a third term, and was told to "stand in a corner" for his pains, was Arthur T. Weil. Weil, who is a veteran on the Washington staff of the Buffalo Evening News, is not unknown to Anglo-Jewish journalism. . . . Wonder what was behind Dr. Chaim Weizmann's sudden "illness" which prevented him from keeping his appointment to reply to Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald over the radio recently. The "illness" developed less than two hours before the scheduled broadcast and Dr. Solomon Goldman had to step into the breach. . . . Otto Freund, Jewish banker and philanthropist of Prague, was recently reported a suicide while held by the Gestapo. "The report is undoubtedly true," a New York friend remarked when he read it. "When I saw him in Prague two years ago, he told me not to be surprised if he committed suicide one of these days." . . . Congrats to Phil Katz, energetic young managing editor of the American Jewish Outlook of Pittsburgh who up and got hitched the other day. Katz and bride, pretty Irma Pachtman, dropped in to the J. T. A. offices on their honeymoon.

Thou Shalt Not Kill

HENRIETTA SZOLD

A "Thou Shalt Not Kill" manifesto was addressed to Palestine Jewry and to Jewish youth by 130 Jewish personalities headed by Miss Henrietta Szold. The manifesto urging observance of the Sixth Commandment, declares that the murder of innocent Arabs strengthens Arab support for the terrorists, the killing of Englishmen undermines the Jews' position among the British people and endangers the sympathies of world democracy, and the murder of Jews by Jews is a signal for armed internal strife that is liable to obliterate the Palestine Jewish Community.

rabbis. Some had been taken from their beds and driven through the streets in nightclothes to the police station.

Refused Water

In the hot courtyard the Jews were guarded by British policemen and held without drinking water or sanitary facilities. Those who tried to approach a garden hose to take a drink were allegedly driven off with blows. Jewish women from the neighborhood brought water but a British officer spilled it on the ground. During the four-hour wait a number of Jews were said to have been beaten without cause.

Finally, the Arab victim of the shooting, whose leg had been slightly injured, was brought in on an armchair and the Jews were paraded before him. He picked out two young brothers as his assailants and four greybeards as those who aided in their getaway. These were arrested and the remainder, after waiting considerably longer, were ordered home and forced to leave through a narrow gate where they ran a gauntlet of uniformed British policemen on the outside and plain clothes men on the inside. The policemen, laughing, allegedly beat the fleeing Jews with gunstocks and rubber hose. Other residents of the neighborhood informed the J. T. A. that all day long uniformed British policemen sporadically beat unoffending Jewish passersby.

Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog and Ben-Zion Uziel issued a manifesto to the Palestine Jewish community pleading "in the names of God, the Torah and Jewish traditions of justice and humanity" not to avenge Arab terrorism by the shedding of innocent blood. The manifesto said violence was "defiling the Jewish work of reconstruction and national regeneration."

Our Film Folk of HOLLYWOOD

By HELEN ZIGMOND

HOLLYWOOD—"Baby Snooks" was born—not made. She was born in the impish mind and restless body of Fanny Brice. She was born more than thirty years ago when Fanny first mimicked the gawky, lolly-popping question mark at kid parties to the great amusement of the carbon copies all about her.

Today her impersonation is so realistic that, waiting in the lush red and green library of her home, we unconsciously braced for the shock of a harum-scarum entrance, of a sudden collision with a multiple-fingered, sucker-sticky urchin, of a peace-blasting "Why?"

Hence, the calm, the grace, the poise which ushered in the famous Jewish comedienne were almost as startling—by contrast.

She looks young—youthful than stage or screen reveals—youthful even than the records disclose. She is of the Cantor-Jolson-Berlin axis of show folks—yet looks like a woman of thirty. She is unexpectedly tall, slim, with light skin and reddish blond hair (beauty parlor chromatrics, perhaps). She isn't beautiful . . . but certainly not as homely as the camera portrays.

"Ah! Schnooks," she pronounces it with a little borscht thickening, and her face lights up with maternal tenderness. "She is my favorite character. She is so much fun. I love her!"

Fanny Brice has always been Snooks and vice versa. She was that elfish youngster who rode the elevated, straining to see into windows that flew by too fast, seeking always the answer to the eternal Why? She was the prissy voice that lured Fanny out into an adult's world at 13 . . . that drove her to try for a job at the Cohen-Harris show . . . that wouldn't be squelched when Cohen advised, "Back to the kitchen." It was persistent, die-hard Snooks who told her mother, "they said she was too thin," and then rushed out for a job in burlesque. Burlesque, being a "book" musical show in those days, not a strip tease, her voice got her the job. But when it came to hoofing, the manager looked glum—she was as graceful as a robot. The show opened. Fanny's voice rang out from the wings, from the box, from the gallery . . . never from the stage!

But irrepressible Snooks would not be denied. Ma had filled her trunk with clothes—shirtwaists and skirts. One by one she inveigled the chorus girls to her room. One by one the skirts and waists disappeared. They were her only means of barter for dancing lessons. When Fanny had become—well, not as graceful as a gazelle—but as the third row chorus there remained only the clothes on her back.

From the third row, she strove for the second, then the first. Then, tempting, was the soubrette's spot. Stick-to-it-ive, ambitious, she soon had the job of understudy. Empty victory—the soubrette was fat and healthy. But there came a day. Fanny gleefully spied a boil on her rival's neck. The boil grew larger . . . but so did the pink bow which covered it. Fanny almost despaired, when suddenly—the boil burst. And a pestiferous, precocious young upstart of 14 became soubrette . . . permanently.

Her subsequent career wound through the devious paths of five kinds of entertainment and always led to the top: Burlesque with Max Spiegel's "College Girls"; vaudeville at the Palace; fourteen years of musicals for Florenz Zeigfeld; movies for Warners, M-G-M; and last, but not least, radio with Baby Snooks!

So true to life is her impersonation that children all over the country are suddenly "Why"-conscious, suddenly aware of their own perpetual inquiry. Letters pour in from teachers and children telling of their amazing interest, asking for the poems she recites.

"She's a pesky, irksome kid to Pa, but to radio she's a model (Continued on page 8)

The Editor's Chair:

This paper's star reporter made a trip to one of the larger cities in the state last week and returned with an essay on "The Average Jew." No product of any survey, "The Average Jew" is the reporter's choice for that honor and may or may not meet with your approval.

Without further ado, I present "The Average Jew."

"Our average Jew is a thoroughly nice fellow with all the virtues and probably most of the vices of his 'Aryan' cousin. He is the kind of guy that you would probably enjoy shooting a round of golf with, who would entertain you well in his home, and who might in a pinch furnish you with the name of a friendly blonde, even though he is married.

"Getting down to brass tacks and plain work, our 'Average Jew' is a member of the Jewish Community in a town of 100,000. He is 27 years old, married, father of a boy 4½ and a girl 1½.

"He makes a comfortable living as a business man in partnership with his father. He has a younger brother and sister. He was born in Russia, came here at the age of 8. The business started with $200, is now a substantial institution, although subject to the normal vicissitudes of the times.

"No slacker in community activities, our hero is a strong booster for B'nai B'rith, which he calls a 'great institution.' He attends all the meetings, and in the last annual membership drive, he hung up the astonishing record of bringing in more members in one week than the whole lodge enrolled in the entire campaign. He thinks the lodge's Anti-Defamation League does a wonderful work.

"On the specific subject of Father Coughlin, he votes for a policy of completely ignoring him. But except for that one instance, he is all against the 'hush-hush' policy. He believes that Jews have rights that should be protected, and he wants the organizations he contributes to, to speak up and support those rights. The General Jewish Council is entirely unknown to him.

"Similarly, he doesn't know anything about the vocational guidance work of B'nai B'rith. He believes that Jewish youth, arriving at maturity, should go into what-

Failure To Take Action Indicates Indifference

FAILURE OF THE Indiana State Republican Committee to take action against Felix McWhirter, the group's treasurer who was called before the Dies Committee to answer questions about his connection with James Campbell of Owensboro, Ky., has caused considerable misgivings on the part of liberals throughout Indiana. Labor circles, liberal groups, and voters interested in the welfare of democracy, will interpret the Committee's silence as another indication of the Republican party's inept indifference to popular feelings.

McWhirter's testimony in Washington definitely did not brand him a purveyor of race hatred. But his persistent loyalty to Campbell and his reticence on many points brought up by the Congressional committee were sufficient to bring immediate action from the National Republican Committee. Worried lest the national party be smeared with the same brush as that which the State Committee prefers to risk, John D. Hamilton, chairman of the national committee sent out thousands of letters to key individuals and groups protesting against any connection between himself or the Republican Party and McWhirter or Campbell.

Writing in The Jewish Ledger, Rabbi Abraham Feldman, leading New England Reform Rabbi and that paper's editor, addressed an editorial "To The Republican Leadership," on the same point. The editorial is reprinted in full:

At the Dies Committee meetings held recently one of the anti-Americans investigated was, as we recall it, a certain banker from Indiana, who happens to be also a member of the Republican National Committee. Moreover, it appears that these anti-American groups in American life have particularly concentrated the circulation of their nefarious propaganda amongst the members of the Republican National Committee. The information revealed at the hearings was of a character that called forth a vigorous statement from the chairman of the Republican National Committee, Mr. John D. M. Hamilton. It is an excellent statement which Mr. Hamilton has made and which came to us. It is a complete and unequivocal disavowal of his personal position in so far as there were innuendoes against him, and likewise against the position of the Republican party. It is a manly statement.

He said in part, "All my life any form of intolerance has been hateful to me. . . I have always opposed any movement to penalize any man because of his race or because of the manner in which he chooses to worship God." He calls attention to his consistent opposition to the Ku Klux Klan and makes the categorical statement: "Should I have the opportunity of voting, as a Republican acting in the interest of my party and my country, I certainly would not vote for anyone who has dedicated himself to a course of intolerance. . . Intolerance to my mind is a great enemy of our American institutions as is Communism, Fascism, Nazism, or any other alien 'ism'."

So far, so good. We have every reason to trust Mr. Hamilton as we had every reason to trust the position of Alf Landon during the last Presidential campaign, as we had every reason to trust the personal position on this important matter of Mr. Herbert Hoover.

The thing that disconcerts us is that all of these negative forces, these anti-American forces, all of these dark forces in American life seem to be turning toward the Republican Party and seem to indicate by their position that they found a fertile field of activity among the members of that party. As we had occasion to point out in the 1928, 1932, and 1936 campaigns, the leading candidates of the Republican Party were men of great personal integrity and steady and unvarying Americanism. The thing that frightens us is that the Knights of the White Camellia, that anti-Catholic forces, the Ku Klux Klan in northern communities, the White Shirts of Pelley, the Sentinels of the Republic, and many, many others, always rally behind the Republican Party in the hope that that way lies the possibility of their success.

We say this now, prior to 1940, prior to the national conventions, prior to the appearance of any candidates, now when we may not be suspected of being politically partisan. We are alarmed because this great political party, the party of Lincoln and of Theodore Roosevelt and of Herbert Hoover, should be given this unfortunate stamp, by the forces of corruption, the Fascist units in American life. And we wonder whether there is not something which the leaders of the Republican Party, who are even now themselves completely free of any bias, who are themselves as alarmed by these eddies in American life, whether there is not something which they could do to purge their party of the unwelcome presence of these poisonous growths in their party. We submit this very respectfully and with deep concern to the considerations of the leaders of the Republican Party in the State and in the nation.

Jewish Girl Seeking Employment Refuses to Register as Gentile, She Writes Rabbi J. X. Cohen—What happens to some Jewish girls in need of a job who do not look Jewish? Read carefully this poignant excerpt from a day-old letter to the commission, written by an intelligent Jewish girl:

"A number of times I was on the point of being sent to an interview when the question of religion arose. Pointblank came the statement: 'Sorry, can't use you. They want a Christian girl.' My friends had told me to register as a Protestant. I am a blonde and blue-eyed and can pass many an eagle-eyed agent as a Christian. I tried adding another 'n' to my name and claiming it to be German. The trick worked.

"But although I can't speak a word of Yiddish; although I understand only a few popular Jewish words; although my home is not Kosher; although I haven't been inside a temple for more than two years; although my very best friend is a German Lutheran; in spite of all these things, I strongly rebel at having to hide my Jewish origin. As much as I need a job, I hate being classified as a Christian—as being something other than what I am. I have decided not to answer attractive ads, because I could not bear to go through with it.

"Is there a solution to my problem, which is also the problem of so many other Jewish girls? There seems to be no open door to a decent job. Is the only solution to the problem—for me—the one (as my friends assure me it is) of denying my religion; not my religion as much as my Jewish identity?"

This Jewish girl asks the question for thousands of her Jewish sisters. The answer, in part, lies in strengthening the work of the Commission on Economic Problems; in part, in the way in which the Jewish community generally and generously supports the work of the American Jewish Congress. This work includes the essential fundamental part of awakening all sectors of the American people to the unfairness of economic discrimination, to the unwisdom of a policy which is negation, and the undermining of American democracy.

Fish Hot Dogs

Kosher For Jews

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
PRAGUE—The meat shortage in Bohemia-Moravia has forced delicatessen manufacturers to invent a new concoction—frankfurters made of fish—and thus, incidentally, has made it possible for Jews to eat "hot dogs" without fear or violating the religious prohibition against eating non-kosher meat. In addition, Catholics, for the first time, can eat sausages on Friday.

child," says Fanny. "If you've ever run into the cricks and quirks of radio censorship, you'd understand how I appreciate her. She's a pleasure and a treasure—she's censor-proof!"

Fanny, like Snooks, is an instinctive psychologist, always studying people, particularly the children. She has a Snooks tester, a 7-year-old girl, whom she brings to rehearsal before every broadcast. Fanny carefully watches her expressions. When the child laughs, she knows the script is right.

She adores her own children—Frances, 19, and Bill, 17. "No, Frances won't be an actress . . . that was only publicity . . . she hasn't that much talent for it," indicating the tip of her finger. Bill is an artist, "a son any mother would wish for."

As we looked about the luxurious surroundings—a house filled with beautiful antiques against a background, dripping with the decorator's brush—we thought of her humble beginnings, and murmured something about the struggle for recognition.

"It's no struggle getting to the top. If you're ambitious, it's just fun. The struggle is staying on top. You must watch yourself or you get dated. I try to do something new at least every five years."

She already has another character, a girl she has had in mind for years, a study in pathos and comedy. With sharp intuition, she analyzes, "Somehow people identify themselves with pathos, not levity. No matter how much people laugh at you, they'll forget you quickly. But if you touch their hearts, you'll live long in their memories."

Following the wide driveway down between sweeping lawns and clumps of shasta daisies, we looked back—still apprehensive—but no questioning eyes of a sneaky-faced Snooks flattened against a window, no clutching hand disturbed that elegant setting.

ever work he wants to, the same as his Gentile brother does.

"He contributes as his means permit to the United Jewish Campaign and to the general (non-Jewish) civic activities of his city.

"He thinks that anti-Semitism is definitely growing, sees evidence of it in his daily business and social life. He is worried about the situation.

"Only in one respect does our discovery differ from normal. He actually attends synagogue, which sticklers for accuracy may well contend disqualifies him for the title of 'Average American Jew.'"

It seems to me that our reporter has found the real "Average American Jew" pretty well. Do you agree?
